COLD CASE CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION UNIT

Dear Investigator,

I'm Special Agent Morgan Cantori and I'm in charge of the Cold Case Criminal Investigation Unit for the State of Connecticut. I'd like to tell you why this case is so very important to me, both personally and professionally.

Joey Caruso was my grandfather. They say he admitted to killing Veronica Falcone and hanged himself but I've always known in my heart it wasn't true. In fact, this case was the driving force behind me studying forensics in college, becoming a detective, and eventually founding the Cold Case Criminal Investigation Unit for the State of Connecticut.

My mother said that even though he was a single dad and worked very hard, my grandfather made their time together special. And when Veronica came along they fell in love with her straight away. She holds very fond memories of the three of them having tea parties with my mother's teddy bears, going out for ice cream, and flying kites. My mother still says those were the happiest days of her life and she was devastated when she lost them.

I've always wanted proof to set the record straight and now you've given it to me. Thank you.

Professionally, this case is a double-edged sword. Due to budget cuts, my cold case unit is in danger of being shut down this year. Of course I'm grateful you reopened the investigation, but now it's marked as another unsolved case and pushed our ratio into dangerous territory. Not to mention how high profile the case has become—it's been all over the news since your breakthrough. According to my superiors in Hartford, the future of my unit rides on closing this case.

It was brilliant how you used the odometer to prove Veronica had driven exactly one mile from Town Center Motors and never could have driven to the ravine. I have great confidence in your investigative skills.

We need to find Veronica's body next. And we could really use your help.

The killer must have buried her somewhere in Robin Falls, but there's a great deal of expense involved in digging for a body so we can't just search an entire one mile radius around Town Center Motors. I need a more specific area to limit expenses and justify it to my superiors. We need to narrow it down to a street corner at least.

There's good news though - I have a lead. It's an email I received after the news broke about the case being reopened. I'm hoping you can make more of it than my three special agents and I have. We're counting on you!

Yours Truly,

Special Agent Morgan Cantori

Dear Special Agent Cantori,

I'm writing to you in regards to the Veronica Falcone murder case, which I just read about on the news. I have some information that may or may not be helpful to you. But I guess I'll let you be the judge of that.

Back in '47, when I was just seven years-old, I spent the summer at my gramps house in Robin Falls. Gramps always went for a long walk late at night, usually heading out sometime around 9:30 or 10 and covering several miles. He called it his "evening constitutional" and told us the night air helped him sleep like a baby, but we all knew the real reason was so he could smoke that old pipe Gram hated.

I remember that on the morning of my 7th birthday (August 27th) Gramps said it was too bad I hadn't been out with him the night before, for a couple of reasons. First, he said he was able to get an up close look at Veronica Falcone's "humdinger" of a bike, as it was parked just outside Wagner's Diner. I sure did love motorcycles back then (still do). And second, he saw Evelyn Churchill out for a walk (this was of high interest to me because I'd developed a huge crush on her over the summer). Gramps didn't feel right about her being out by herself so he walked her back home and told her a pretty young lady shouldn't be out walking by herself at that time of night.

Bear with me, I'm getting to the point. When I saw the date Veronica Falcone went missing in the news, I realized that it was the very night before my birthday when Gramps saw her bike. In hindsight, I think it seems a little more than odd that it was parked out there that night when everything in town would have been closed up tight for hours, especially since it was the same night she disappeared.

The only problem is that there was no Wagner's Diner. Before Gram passed she always used to tease Gramps that he was losing his marbles. That may have been so, but I know he saw her bike that night because he described it in great detail. Where he actually saw it, I don't know.

Like I said, I have no idea if this is going to be helpful to the case but I thought I should share this in the event it makes any sense to you. If you need me to make a formal statement for your case file or if I can be of any more assistance, please give me a call at (860) 555-6152. I'd be happy to help if I can.

Sincerely,
Donny Davidson
